Summer's over, the kids are well along, with little time left in the first quarter of their football school year.

We non-schoolers are about in the same period of play so far as our T. A. M. S. year is concerned. This is the first quarter of our ninth year. We have a good team of well seasoned players. Our offensive team has done a real job the first eight minutes (8 years, since 1960). We have been blessed with "heads high" quarterbacks (presidents) in the persons of George Fuld, James J. Curto, Paul Hamm, Virginia Culver and Bill Spilman.

Our defensive team has been superb. We started out as an underrated small time outfit, with little support, a small cash reserve and an uncertain future. It so happened that we were well founded well organized, and well managed. We stayed with the original concept of "service" to the token and medal collectors of the world, and we gradually, but surely, became a factor in the numismatic world. Our hand-to-mouth existence of the first few months suddenly got a shot in the arm when Mr. Joseph Segel, President of the Franklin Mint, made us an outright donation of 1,000 shares of Franklin Mint stock, which at that time had a value of $6.00 per share. (No need to quote the price today, as it changes, always upward, every day.)

As of December 1st, 1968, the Token and Medal Society is a "going" organization. We have plans for enlarged membership, increased collector participation activities, more reprints of out of print numismatic books, brochures and pamphlets. We are an "eager" outfit, capable of paying our own way (thanks to Joseph Segel) and looking for ways to help, organize and coordinate any reasonable program of "Token and Medal" numismatics.

Fellow T. A. M. S. 'ers we have the ball, we have three full quarters left. This is only the first quarter of this game. We need team play from here on out. We need your "thinking" support. What do we need? What can you do to better our society? Give this your careful, serious thought. Don't be a back seat driver. Take the wheel and give us your ideas now. You have as much to say as to how we operate the rest of this year as any officer or board member. You, as a member of T. A. M. S., can tell us how you want your society run, but tell us now, not at the end of the year. Write some articles for our Journal, make some suggestions or some criticisms, but make your ideas known. We are open, wide open, to any ideas. We will treat every idea with respect and careful consideration.

Let's go for a win in '69.

Ralph A. Mitchell, President.

from the EDITOR

Having covered the gamut of numismatics from collecting Lincoln cents to odd and curious monies, my favorite field has always been tokens and medals. The thrill of finding a scarce or rare item (which is now just about impossible in the U.S. series), is still possible in the field of Exonumia, and I get just as much of a jolt today as I did forty or fifty years ago on discovering an unusual or Unique piece.

Let me congratulate Cliff Mishler on the excellent job he has done with the TAMS Journal. Under his editorship, both the Journal and TAMS have attained stature in the international numismatic world. We all owe him a debt of thanks for his devotion and dedication to our group.

From the heavy correspondence I am receiving from him, I know he will be available for advice and assistance when necessary.

Our fine group of Associate Editors will continue to work with me and our past president and well-known numismatic author, Virginia Culver, will be added to the staff. There will be one or two more appointments by the time the next Journal comes out.

Both Curly and Cliff have made pleas for material for our publication. Our files are extremely low and we need short articles and interesting information, as well as the feature articles. Please do not put off completing any articles you may have started. WE NEED THEM NOW!

We are fortunate to have as our Book Editor, Al Hoch. I have worked with him previously and he quietly and efficiently gets things done, and it is through the reprints that we can spread education in numismatics. We hope that Al will have more material coming off the presses this year.

The Medallion — The final issue in volume seven of this official bulletin of the California Exonumist Society was released recently. Its six pages include one picture page each on the July C.E.S. meeting at the Huntington-Sheraton and the August C.E.S. "Happening" at the A.N.A. in San Diego. "A Remarkable Russian Medal" is discussed by Matthew J. Van der Voort and "The Coronado Ferry" by Dwight A. Safford.

MEDALS OF U.S. AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATIONS, INSTITUTES AND SOCIETIES

By Robert J. Lindesmith, TAMS # 152

Lyman H. Low, in his 1904 Catalogue of the Major Charles Porter Nichols collection of medals, lists the Agricultural medals under the following heading: "The greater portion which follow are by engravers of the first half of the last century, and represent the work of those who covered nearly the entire field. Those who preceded them, with others who lived in their times, not mentioned here, would form together but a 'corporal's guard.' "

This listing is particularly interesting because the medals are listed by State; metal type; size and engraver. While far from complete, it represents, as far as I can learn, the first effort to list the medals in a form suitable for easy reference.

With the Nichols collection as a starting point, I have compiled the following trial listing, which is mainly based on entries found in some 700 auction catalogues dating from 1861 to the present. While primarily intended for my personal use in my research on the medallic works turned out by early American Medalists and Die-sinkers, I have reason to believe that the TAMS readers might find the list of some interest.

As a guide to the rarity and the date the dies were cut, I have listed the medals that are found in the following collections:

Alfred S. Robinson - April 16th, 1861.
Benjamin Haines (Elizabeth, N.J.) Jan. 19-23, 1863.
Dr. F. S. Edwards (New York) October 16th, 1865.
Henry W. Holland (Boston, Mass.) Nov. 11-16, 1878.
Major Charles Porter Nichols (Springfield, Mass.) April 19, 1904.

Where the pieces are not found in the above collections, I have indicated the earliest reference such as (Cogan-1871), a collection catalogued by Edward Cogan in 1871. (R.J.L.) refers to medals in my collection.

In the preface to the 1878 sale, Mr. W. Elliot Woodward states: "Mr. Holland's Medallic Collection is so well known to American Numismatists that it hardly requires an introduction; but I may be excused for calling the attention of those who have not seen it to a few of its peculiarities. A glance at the catalogue will show its great extent, comprising as it does considerably more than two thousand specimens; but a glance, except to the close observer, might fail to reveal one most important fact, namely that there are in the collection no duplicates in metals; so that each number represents a distinct pair of dies. Mr. Holland's preference seems to have been for medals in silver, of which there is an unprecedented number, but he never thought it worth while to retain even two medals in different metals."

The size (approximate figures) of the medals is given in Millimeters and by the American Coin Scale (One-Sixteenth of an Inch). The last entry represents the number of times I have seen the variety listed.

At the present there appears to be very little collector interest in early Agricultural medals which is rather hard to understand as they represent some of the finer medallic work turned out by early American medalists and die-sinkers such as C. C. Wright; F. N. Mitchell; Henry Mitchell; A. C. Morin; F. B. Smith; Hartmann; Robert Lovett, Sr.; Robert Lovett, Jr.; George H. Lovett and W. H. Key.

With the exception of the American Institute medal, the large silver medals are seldom offered and would probably sell for around $20 to $25 in the present market. The few large bronze medals in my collection were acquired at prices from $5 to $8.50. The small medals from $2.50 to $5.

It is evident from the preparation of this listing and a study of the medals in my collection that the forming of a collection of this series, as well as a study of the medals and their relation to the history of U.S. Agriculture, could represent a rather rewarding experience.

The silver medal awarded, in 1852, to Charles J. Leonard by the Ohio State Board of Agriculture for his exhibit of ancient and modern coins represents another reason why certain agricultural medals are highly prized by collectors. In addition to commemorating one of the early U.S. exhibitions of coins, there is good reason to believe that this is the same Leonard who cut the dies for several early "politicals", Polk, Dallas, Clay, Taylor, Cass, Pierce and Scott. As George Lovett cut the dies for the Ohio State Board of Agriculture medal, we might also further speculate that Leonard was working for the Lovetts and that the medal was responsible for his being in Ohio at this time. Charles Leonhard (Leonard?) is listed as an Engraver at NYC 1856-57 in the Groce and Wallace "Dictionary of Artists in America."

The following interesting quote is taken from an Address delivered by Robert Bolton Jr., (the historian of Westchester county) at the Ploughing and Spading Matches held at White Plains, Westchester Co., N.Y. on Oct. 5, 1848:

"According to Sir Joseph Banks, the potato, one of the most important culinary vegetables of the present day, ' was first introduced into England from America, by the colonists sent out by Sir Walter Raleigh, in 1586. It was first cultivated in Ireland by the grandfather of Sir Robert Southwell, from tubers given him by Sir Walter Raleigh.' At this early period it was looked upon as so great a rarity that it was only planted in small quantities. In the year 1619, the common market-price of the potato was one shilling English per lb. For a long time it was treated as a fruit, baked in pie with spices and wine, or eaten with sugar; and nearly two hundred years elapsed from its first introduction before it was cultivated as a field crop.

Since that time what rapid advances have been made in Agriculture by the aid of our State Fairs, the American Institute, and our Country Societies! It has been truly said, that the 'great business of America, at the present day, is Agriculture, for already has nature written upon her——'THE GRANARY OF THE WORLD.' "

While I'm well aware that the following listing is far from complete and that it does not cover all the important medal collections sold in the past 100 years, I have hopes that it will encourage other collectors to send in further data on this interesting series.

A FRENCH RELIEF CHIT OF 1848

By - Randolph Zander TAMS # 1463

Bad times before and during the provisional government that followed the French revolution of 1848 made for economic disruption and unemployment. The provisional government inclined to a generous social security policy—generous at least in the light of the liassez-faire ideas of the time. There was prudence in the policy as well, for growing masses of Parisian unemployed threatened even deeper political instability.

So in February 1848 the government guaranteed every man the right to a job. The guarantee was given in a hurry, under ideaological and political pressure, and without suitable practical preparation. Numbers of jobs were found and thousands went to work, mostly building railroads and digging canals in the vicinity of Paris. Even so, there were two or three men for each new public-works billet.

In March 1848 a precarious solution was worked out: The jobs would rotate. When a man worked he earned two francs a day. Days he was on the waiting list he got one franc, payable at his local arondissement or mairie. The system rocked along for a couple of months until the more conventionally-minded folk got back their confidence and reasserted their influence and authority.

* * * *

A relic of these ephemeral events comes down to us in the form of one of the crudely cast lead tokens which were given the unemployed when they weren't working on the railroad. The piece is 48mm in diameter. The obverse legend is R.F:/SECOURS/ AUX OUVRIERS/SANS TRAVAIL./1848. On the reverse the legend is BON/DES MAIRIES/UN FRANC/PAR JOUR/ (flourish).

The style, such as it is, is pure Grandma Moses; and the token bears witness to the improvisation that characterized the whole affair.

RARE SHELL CARDS DISCOVERED

David E. Schenkman — TAMS # 825,

The embossed or shell store card pictured above was listed as number 549 in the article by Mitchell and Rulau (TAMS Journal, Volume I, Number 4). However, the existence of this piece was known only because of the partial description given it in Tildon's early listing of shell cards.

The complete description is as follows; L.B. RICHARDSON & CO.,/BROKERS,/OFFICE/108 CENTRAL ST./LOWELL,/MASS./L.B. RICHARDSON, F.L. RICHARDSON. The reverse color is yellow. The obverse device is the Liberty Head design, dated 1776; metal is gilt.

The second token, listed by Mitchell and Rulau as number 739, was known to exist only because of a partial listing given it in an early auction catalog. The reverse legend reads, M.B. WASHBURN/MANUFACTURER/OF/RAILWAY/SUPPLIES/137 141 ELM ST./NEW YORK. The metal is gilt, with a brass frame, and the obverse is the mirror variety.

German Flying Aces of World War I on Medals

By Gunter W. Kienast, NLG, TAMS # 1353

First Lieutenant Max Immelmann died in June of 1916; Captain Oswald Boelcke lost his life on October 28, 1916; Captain Manfred von Richthofen was killed on April 21, 1918; Ernst Udet committed suicide in Germany on November 17, 1941, and Marshal of the Empire Hermann Goering took a capsule of cyanide which ended his life in the Nuremberg war-crimes prison in 1946.

What do all these men have in common? They were the men whose names and deeds were known to every man, woman and child in the Germany of World War I and whose names also became known to countless others in countries outside Germany. By no means do they represent the complete slate of prominent flyers. There were many others like W. Reinhard, Werner Voss, Kurt Wolff and Allmenroeder, but the first 5 men are a representative cross section of the history of flight of World War I whose deeds have become legendary.

These the author selected to show how their images and memories were immortalized on medals of that time. Four of the five medals were made by the German medalist of Munich, Karl Goetz, while the artist of the Immelmann medal was F. Eue.

First Lieutenant Max Immelmann was a daring flyer. Called the "Eagle of Lille" his name first became known through out Europe in 1915 after he had shot down his fourth airplane. He had received various decorations, the highest order, Pour le Merite being awarded him at the time he shot down his eleventh adversary. He was as kind and likeable as Boelcke although he had a more arrogant nature. He was the pilot selected to fly the first Fokkers built for the German Airforce. Immelmann developed a technique which could even have been used in the battles of World War II. He dropped out of the sun onto his adversary, belting him with a burst of the machine gun, then zooming up and away in what was called the famous "Immelmann turn."

The Fokker planes gave Immelmann much trouble, so much that Boelcke refused to fly them and preferred the trusted Albatross. On May 31, 1916, after 15 air victories, Immelmann had a malfunction of his plane. However, he was able to land safely and found on inspection that he had shot away half of his propeller. The engine also was torn from its moorings and was only supported by two weak connections.

In June 1916 over Douai inside German lines, Immelmann was in pursuit of two British planes, one of which was shot down by one of his comrades. Suddenly Immelmann's plane went out of control, he began to dive and could not get the plane under control again. He fell six thousand feet to the earth, where the fuselage snapped. The "Eagle of Lille" was dead at the age of 25 with 15 air victories to his credit.

Some claimed the malfunction occured when he had shot his propeller off due to maladjustments. Others said he was hit by anti aircraft fire from his own German batteries. Still others claim he was hit by the British gunners of the one remaining airplane he was pursuing.

After Immelmann had shot down his 12th airplane Emperor Wilhelm wrote him a letter of commendation. Before the letter was finished however, the report came that Immelmann had shot down his thirteenth adversary. The Kaiser crossed out the word "twelth" and substituted "thirteenth" in the letter, saying that one could not write as fast as Immelmann shoots. Immelmann was a native of Dresden, born in 1890.

Despite his 15 air victories which in the light of the total of World War I must be considered a small number, he was considered a brilliant flyer, daring and earmarked for bigger things at the time of his death. He was chosen to form his own fighter unit.

His medal is 33mm in diameter, made of bronze and gilded. It was designed by F. Eue. The reverse shows the landscape of Lille and the inscription DER ADLER VON LILLE (The Eagle of Lille). The medal was struck by L. Chr. Lauer in Nuremberg, Germany.

Captain Oswald Boelcke was the teacher of Baron Manfred von Richthofen, the "Red Baron". Boelcke was a superior air fighter with a keen military mind. His ideas on tactics and organization would prove invaluable to the German Air command in both World Wars. He did not like the Fokker planes and his plane was an Albatross painted completely black. His pupils in Fighter Squadron 2 were taught with chalk and drawing board on which Boelcke outlined his tactics of bringing down his adversaries. Boelcke was a kind and likeable man. He had no personal enemies, and treated everybody fairly and with courtesy. He visited survivors of air duels in German hospitals and brought them gifts. Although shot down twice, he was believed to be invincible.

His end carried very tragic implications: On October 28, 1916 Erwin Boehme, a fellow pilot in Boelcke's Jagdstaffel 2 accidentally brushed against Boelcke's wing, breaking part of it off. The machine of Boelcke went into a spin; the pilot could not control it any more. Boehme accompanied Boelcke's plane during its ghastly fall. The Albatross hit the earth with a tremendous impact, Boelcke's head was smashed, he had died instantly.

After Boelcke's death the Fighter Squadron was named "Jagdstaffel Boelcke". Boehme had a hard time trying to overcome his guilt feelings. He threatened to commit suicide, was talked out of it by his comrades and in time became the new leader of the Jagdstaffel Boelcke.

At the time of Boelcke's death the British Royal Flying Corps dropped a note over the German lines, similar to one which they later dropped on Richthofen's death, saying that the Flying Corps honored "the brave and chivalrous" opponent.

The medal commemorating Oswald Boelcke's death was made by Karl Goetz. It shows on the reverse the Roman figure 40 in the exergue, indicating Boelcke's forty air victories, third highest after Richthofen's 80 and Udets 62 in World War I. The medal was a bronze, cast in the diameter size of 85mm. It also was struck in silver and bronze in the 36mm size. The inscription on the reverse reads KAMPF IN DEN LUEFTEN (Battle in the skies).

Captain Baron Manfred von Richthofen was the most famous of the German Flying aces of all times. Called the "Red Baron", due to the color of his Fokker plane, he died on April 21, 1918 with 80 air victories to his credit. He was born on May 2, 1892 in Breslau. His father was an army officer. Manfred and his younger brother Lothar followed in the father's footsteps and also became officers.

At the beginning of the war Richthofen belonged to the cavalry, served later in the infantry and transferred to the Flying Corps in May of 1915. He flew his first solo in October 1915 and crashed the plane. In March 1916 he was transferred to the front as a fighter pilot.

During his career he created what came to be known as the "Flying" or "Richthofen's Circus." The machines were painted in grotesque patterns. Nothing was too gaudy for the taste of the German airmen. The Richthofen Flying Circus was known for chivalrous combat. Richthofen himself shot down his first plane on September 17, 1916; he came into prominence early in 1917 after he had brought down his 52nd airplane. He was given the highest decoration of Germany the "Ordre Pour le Merite" on January 16, 1917. Richthofen earned the reputation of never killing and enemy after he had him "cold." After forcing an opponent down, he often landed beside him, helped him from his machine, and saw to it that he was honorably treated. This view clashes somewhat with a statement made by Curtis Kinney of Mount Vernon, Ohio in the Cleveland Plain Dealer of April 21, 1968 who says "Richthofen was a skillful pilot, a great hunter, a dead shot and he was merciless and bloodthirsty. He would pursue a victim to the bitter end."

Richthofen was shot down on April 21, 1918 by Captain Arthur Roy Brown of the Royal Flying Corps, a Canadian pilot flying a Sopwith F 1 "Camel" plane. The "Red Baron" died from a single bullet through the chest. Brown came to the help of Lt. W. May who was in trouble with Richthofen and in pursuit was able to hit the German Captain. The British buried Richthofen with full military honors and dropped a note and a picture of Richthofen's flower covered coffin over the German lines. The note read: "To the German Flying Corps. Rittmeister Baron Manfried (sic) von Richthofen was killed in aerial combat on April 21st, 1918. He was buried with full military honours."

The medal executed by Karl Goetz to honor the flying ace and hero was made in cast bronze of the 93mm diameter size and also struck in bronze and silver with a 36mm diameter.

Mr. P.R. Gutt of Hamelin, an outstanding collector of aviation medals during and after World War I compares the execution of the eagle on the reverse of the medal to the works of the old masters who put a similar design on the tetradrachm of Syracuse. Goetz thanked him for this comparison and said: "I created the Richthofen medal out of deep respect."

The collector should note that there are two varieties of this medal available. Goetz, as in several other instances, using false information, set the number of air victories of Richthofen at 89 and the date of his death as April 12, 1918. This was later corrected to read 80 and April 21, 1918. The author has had in his possession at one time or other the cast 93mm diameter with the wrong number of victories and the wrong date and the struck medal with the corrected data. The inscription on the reverse reads DER ROTE KAMPFFLIEGER (The Red Fighter).

Captain Ernst Udet had the second highest number of air victories in the German camp, 62, and he was one of the few to come out of World War I alive, but his end was more tragic than if he had been shot down on the field of battle.

Udet flew a Fokker D-VII, gaily decorated, with the name of his fiancee painted on the side of the fuselage. He was an expert flyer, who proved his skill in post World War I days, when he flew a sportsplane in air-days and exhibitions. He was able to pick-up a handkerchief with the tip of his wing. He also was famous for flying his small sportsplane under the bridges of the Spree river in Berlin for which he was repeatedly in trouble with the police.

Udet became a prominent figure during the rebuilding of the German Airforce in Nazi Germany from 1933 to 1939. Hitler appointed him to be the Generalluftzeugmeister (Chief of Air Force Ordnance). He worked closely with his former comrade of World War I, the now Field Marshal Herman Goering.

Udet committed suicide on November 17, 1941 when he was no longer in the good graces of his chief Goering, although this was not declared as such during the Nazi regime; according to the official news release he died by accident.

The medal pictured here was made by Karl Goetz in 1941 commemorating the World War I ace after the announced tragic fatal accident. It was available in the cast version in bronze of 100mm diameter and also struck in bronze and silver in the 36mm size.

The reverse shows the figure 62 celebrating Udet's World War I victories as a fighter pilot, the design of a World War I airplane, and a dive bomber of the Junkers-87 design of World War II vintage coming out of the clouds. The inscription on the reverse from 9 to 3 o'clock reads STAFFELFUHRER! JAGDGESCH. RICHTHOFEN (Squadron Leader Fighter Wing Richthofen) and below GENERALLUFTZEUGMEISTER (Chief of Air Ordnance).

Captain Hermann Goering in 1918 was the last commander of the Fighter Wing Richthofen. He had to his credit 22 air victories. After World War I Goering entered the Nazi Party under Adolf Hitler while it was still in its early stages. When they acquired power in 1933, Hitler made him the Air Minister for Germany. In 1939 Goering was designated as Hitler's successor in case of the latter's death during the war. He became the chief organizer of the new German air force and initiated the entire air war in World War II. Hermann Goering ammassed a tremendous amount of wealth and owned numerous fabulous paintings and objects of art which in most cases were obtained for him illegaly through the power of his office and by sheer force.

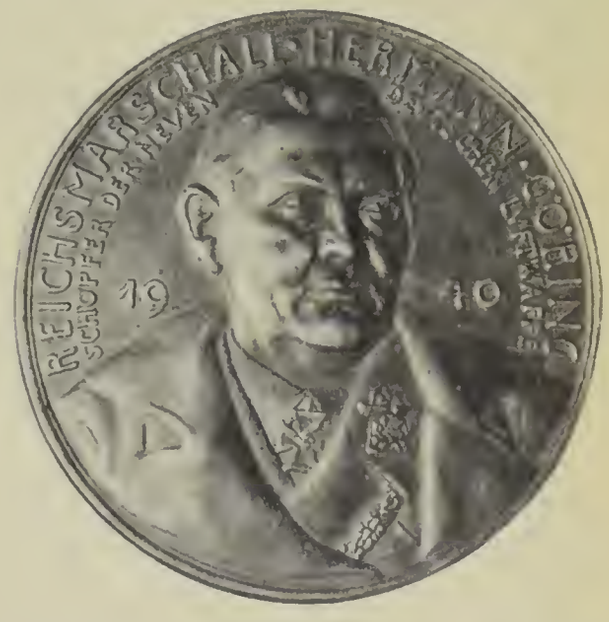
Goering surrendered to U.S. Troops in 1945. He became the chief defendant at the Nuremberg war-crimes trials and was sentenced to death by that court. He took his life shortly before his scheduled hanging with a capsule of cyanide which was smuggled into his cell in a bar of soap.

Goetz shows Goering in a straight pose facing, although his initial design was a profile. The artist must have had second thoughts about the profile since Goering bore no resemblance to a leader of the "nordic master race".

The inscription on the obverse below his title and name reads SCHOEPFER DER NEUEN DEUTSCHEN LUFTWAFFE (Creator of the new German Air Force.) The inscription on the reverse above reads LETZTER KOMMANDEUR D. JAGDESCHWADERS RICHTHOFEN (Last commander of the fighter wing Richthofen.) Inscription in exergue UNSER WEG IST DUNKEL KAMERADEN! ABER UNSERE TREUE - WIRD UNSER LICHT SEIN! Goring 1918 (Our path is dark, comrades. Our fidelity however will shine as our light. Goring 1918).

Goering was awarded two unique honors during the Nazi regime. He was made a REICHSMARSCHALL (Imperial Marshal), a rank which was only awarded once! Secondly he was given the Grand Cross of the Iron Cross, a larger cross than the Knights Cross with Golden Oak Leaves and Diamonds, worn round the neck hanging from a wider ribbon. It was awarded for activities having a decisive influence upon the course of the war, which Goering received after the surrender of France in 1940.

I might be permitted to add to the list of the five World War I German aces, one more medal commemorating a flying hero, this one of World War II, not I.



Colonel Werner Molders had 115 air victories to his credit, 14 of which were shot down during the Spanish War in 1936. Molders did not die in an air duel but ironically as a passenger in a plane which crashed on November 22, 1941. He wore the highest German award for valor, the Knights Cross of the Iron Cross with Golden Oak Leaves and Diamonds.

This medal is also made by Karl Goetz. The cast bronze medal comes in a 105mm diameter size; the same design also was made as a struck medal in silver or bronze of 36mm diameter. The inscription on the reverse reads above: UNBESIEGT - + November 22, 1941 (Died undefeated November 22, 1941.)

Inscription in exergue DAVON 14 IN SPANIEN IM KAMPFE GEGEN DEN BOLSCHEWISMUS (-in continuation of the figure 115 above-...of which 14 in Spain during the battle against bolshevism.)

I would like to close this treatise of "German Flying Aces on Medals" with two questions. The first is: Is it peculiar to the German character alone to commemorate its heroes on medals like the ones shown here? The other question is: Were George Guynemer of France, Edward Mannock of England and Eddy Rickenbacker of the United States, the Flying Aces of World War I of the respective countries, celebrated and commemorated on medals in a similar manner? If so, would one of my learned fellow collectors consider writing an article on them similar to this one?

WM. F. LUTZ

Civil War Engraver of Cincinnati, Ohio

By Robert J. Lindesmith, TAMS #152, Dayton, Washington

The following entry found in a January 7-9, 1878, auction sale catalogued by John W. Haseltine contains a reference to the excessively rare Cincinnati Union League Medal (Not listed by DeWitt, "A Century of Campaign Buttons.") and information which will be of interest to the collectors of Civil War Tokens:

> Lot 957.
> 1863; Cincinnati Union League Medal; obv., a defiant eagle perched upon a cannon, holding a scroll inscribed "The Constitution;" snake clogging the wheels of the cannon; the snake's head dividing the date; "Death to Traitors. Union 1864 League;" rev., United States flag; inscription: "M. C. E. O. I. L. T; U. 1776 S.;" 13 stars surrounding the flag; bronze; fine; excessively rare; only two struck, and this the only good one; (size) 15.
> (In connection with the above I have received from the engraver of the dies the following letter, which will be sold with the medal:)
> DEAR SIR: — Yours of 22d received. In reply I will state that I engraved the dies at Cincinnati for the Union League. The dies cracked at the second impression, but the male or relief dies are good yet. Mr. W. K. Lanphear, corner Gay and Lombard Streets, Baltimore, can inform you where they are. The impression which I sold is the only good one ever taken from the female dies.
> Respectfully, WM. F. LUTZ

The medal was evidently purchased by I. F. Wood, as he exhibited it at the November 20, 1878, meeting of the A.N.S.

From the above letter and my study of the Civil War token field, I would be inclined to believe that Lutz was in the employ of W. K. Lanphear rather than J. A. Hughes. The evidence that hubs of the central devices, Mercury head, flying eagle, etc. were used in the creation of the dies used by Hughes and Lanphear would indicate that Lanphear supplied Hughes with dies.

As Lutz turned out some rather artistic designs and Hughes was interested in the pieces from a collectors standpoint, there is a logical explanation for the signed dies. Hughes struck several rare silver and copper-nickel varieties for his own collection as well as his collector friend, Zanoni (his own card). Hughes' entire collection of American Silver, which contained twenty-three silver cards made by Hughes, was purchased by Cleneay in 1865.

THE LIBRARIAN REPORTS
by Irene Alexander

Happy New Year. Now's the time to do some extra reading about our hobby. We have received some interesting new items for your pleasure. Take another careful look at the complete library listing as printed in the TAMS Journal for June 1968, and see what we have in your special field. That extra bit of numismatic information that you could include in your exhibit of medals or tokens at a numismatic show might increase your points toward an award.

Books which are being purchased in January and will probably be available to borrow by the time you receive this Journal include "Hickey Brothers Trade Checks" by Foster Pollack, The Dalton and Hamer reprint, and the Heinrich and Guttag reprint. Suggestions for additional titles to be purchased are welcomed from our members.

TAMS

FREE: DATED 1968 TOKEN WITH ERROR

The above token was handed out as a table favor at the TAMS banquet in San Diego during the ANA convention in August.

200,000 of these tokens were ordered from RYCRO LTD. of Chicago for national distribution according to the public relations department of International Foods.

Every year, on Shrove Tuesday, the International House of Pancakes holds a national pancake eating contest. (The first contest originated in San Diego in 1960.) It is staged at various pancake houses around the country with teams from local universities and/or colleges competing against each other

This year, 1968, the tokens were actually distributed to the various pancake houses and the Shrove Tuesday date was nigh before the error of SHROUVE was noticed; much to the embarrassment of the company!

This aluminum token is "crown" size; approximately 40mm in diameter.

A quantity of these tokens has been made available for distribution to TAMS members who were unable to attend the banquet in San Diego.

Quite simply: write or print the word SHROUVE; your last name; your TAMS membership number on a 2 x 2 coin envelope and enclose along with a stamped and addressed envelope. Send to: Mr. J. B. Nestle 1207 No. Orange Drive, Hollywood, California 90038.
